

Ufuoma O. Agarín Bio

Ufuoma O. Agarín, J.D., is an elected member of the Baltimore City Democratic State Central Committee representing District 40 and the inaugural President of the rechartered Baltimore City Young Democrats, where she champions youth political engagement, cultivates emerging Democratic leaders, and works to strengthen the party's presence in Baltimore City.

Her roots in leadership and public service were established in Baltimore, where she entered Coppin State University at 16, earned her B.A. in Political Science at 19, and served as Miss Coppin State University before receiving a full-tuition scholarship to the University of Baltimore School of Law, where she concentrated in public interest law.

She currently serves as Director of External Affairs for the Maryland Office of the Public Defender, bringing her expertise in strategic communications, public policy, and government affairs to statewide public service.

Previously, she served as Executive Director of the Legislative Black Caucus of Maryland, the nation's largest Black legislative caucus, where she led legislative strategy, policy initiatives, and advocacy efforts alongside state and national leaders.

Her career also includes experience with the Maryland General Assembly, Baltimore City Council, and political campaigns, as well as journalism, political commentary, and public affairs communications through contributions to The AFRO, FOX45, and Maryland Matters.
